

EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT

Following a major disaster, first responders who provide police, fire, and medical services will not be able to meet the demand for these services. The City of Beaverton Emergency Management Program and their volunteers want you to know they can help by providing disaster preparedness education and training through three programs; Take 5 to Survive, Map Your Neighborhood and the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT).

Take 5 To Survive

This program is designed for people who have difficulty finding time to prepare for emergencies. It shows individuals and families how they can prepare for emergencies by using a series of 5 minute projects. If you would like more information about Take 5 To Survive please email Preparedness@BeavertonOregon.gov or call 503-629-6400.

Map Your Neighborhood

This program is designed to prepare neighborhoods to be self-reliant during the first hours of a disaster response when traditional 9-1-1 responders are overwhelmed by demand. If you would like more information about Map Your Neighborhood please email Preparedness@BeavertonOregon.gov or call 503-629-6400.

CERT Community Emergency Response Team

The Beaverton Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) is a group of trained volunteers from the community who assist emergency response personnel during disasters and emergencies. Citizens in the community are trained to cut off utilities, put out small fires, administer first aid, search for victims, organize themselves, and collect disaster intelligence to support first responder efforts. If you would like more information about CERT please email CERT@BeavertonOregon.gov or call 503-629-6400.
